

Pennant Cinched As Crackers Trim Birmingham, 4-2

"Pug" Cavet, Greatest Factor in Recent Triumphant Pelican Series, Hurls Deciding Contest.

VICTORY ASSURES PLACE IN SERIES

Atlanta's foe in Dixie Finals Being Decided in Fort Worth-Dallas Playoff This Week.

BY GEORGE CONGDON.

The Crackers broke down the last barrier between them and Atlanta's first pennant since 1919 by beating
the Birmingham Barons, 4 to 2,
Thursday at Spiller field.

Atlanta baseball fans with predictions for low tricks can now safely telegraph Larry Gilbert, care New Orleans baseball company, congratulations on his having the Pelicans in second place this year.

The Pels can win all three of their remaining games while the Crackers lose both of their other performances and still Mr. Gilbert will have a second place club.

Atlanta's percentage for the season,
including Thursday's game, is .572.
The New Orleans percentage is .553.
Two defeats for Atlanta would bring the Crackers down to .505. Three wins for New Orleans in the face of two Cracker losses would bring the Pels up to .562, three points short of tying the Atlanta club.

The question mark back of Fort Worth on the train schedule that adorns the Crackers' clubhouse is still there. Bill Stickey is just waiting to mark up train time for the Dixie series until the Fort Worth-Dallas series decides the Crackers'
foes for the Southern baseball classic.

Cavet Is Candidate.
Considered the most likely candidate for wiring congratulations to Mr.
Gilbert on his second-place New Orleans club, Tiller Pug Cavet, former Pel, and conqueror of New Orleans
since his change of professional garb,
when interviewed after Thursday's game, had one comment.

"All I want to wire to New Orleans folks is to send Jules Heinman a telegram thanking him for turning me loose to join the Atlanta club," was Mr. Cavet's commendable comment.

As the one pitcher on the Cracker
staff who consistently beat New Orleans in Cracker-Pel series, it was fine
for the sentiment of the thing as well as Cavet's pitching record that he was selected by Manager Niehoff, of the Crackers, to win the game that clinched the flag. Cavet pitched pretty baseball yesterday, giving up only seven hits. Stone, another left hander, who opposed him, gave up only six hits in the seven frames he worked,
but his education in the matter of geography showed neglect. On seven occasions he fired four bad ones to one hitter, for that many walks.

Crowder and Wheeler Dell will oppose each other in today's game, the next to the last that the Crackers will play this season against a Southern league ball club.

Dell Stated Today.
The Crackers probably will present
a much changed lineup for today's game. Collop probably will be out with a skinned-up knee that he has been fighting to stay in the game.
Wilbur Good may take a rest because of a pair of legs that are in the hands of Trainer Bill Dailey because of pulled ligaments.

The Crackers played championship
ball against the Barons Thursday.
There wasn't anything like an error,
except in one case, and team play, a remarkably bit of it by Rod Murphy at first, changed that to a putout. In the sixth, with one down, Ganzell banged one between short and third that Gazella barely nailed. He hurried his throw and it came down

NEUFIELD T. JONES OFFERS FULL ALIBI TO LIQUOR CHARGE

Bought Drug Concern
With Approval of Dry
Unit To Get Acquainted With Bootleggers.

Baltimore, September 17.—(AP)—

Taking the witness stand in his own defense late today, Neufield T. Jones testified that he bought the Maryland Drug and Chemical company with the consent and approval of the intelligence department of the prohibition enforcement unit at Washington, to "get acquainted with alcohol dealers and bootleggers in Baltimore."

Jones' testimony was the most sensational so far submitted in the trial
of himself; his brother, Winfield; Maurice P. Caro, Isadore Glasser and Simon Kehler on charges of illegally disposing of alcohol secured by the drug company on government permits.

In Line of His Duties.
Jones said he had worked for the prohibition unit for more than a year prior to the purchase of the Maryland concern in 1924, and had investigated and collected several important cases. His connection with the drug company, he declared, was in furtherance of his duties as prohibition officer.

Prohibition Commissioner Roy A.
Haynes was called to the stand by the defense today. He admitted writing a letter to Neufield Jones, expressing regret at the latter's resignation as chief of the prohibition field
forces in Georgia. The commissioner admitted, however, that he did not know of any connection between Neufield's
prohibition work and the Maryland
Drug and Chemical company.

William R. Pohlery, assistant prohibition administrator for the sixth district, testified that he issued the Jones
brothers a whisky withdrawal permit.

Appointment Unsolicited.
Jones testified that his home was in Atlanta, Ga., and that his father was the Rev. Charles Jones, of that city, former state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league of Georgia. Neufield testified that in November, 1921, he was called from Atlanta by Internal Revenue Commissioner Blair to take a position as an assistant federal prohibition director, the appointment
being unsolicited by him.

During the thirteen months he kept the position, Jones asserted, he worked in several big cases and was arrested twice. His arrests were by pre-arrangement, he declared, and were for the purpose of rounding up groups of bootleggers. He was always "kept behind the scenes," he said, in order
not to become known to bootleggers.

Troops Patrol Darien During Negro's Trial

Guardsmen Protect Prisoner Who Is Convicted for Attempted Assault.

Darien, Ga., September 17.—(AP)— Conviction, carrying a sentence of 20 years, the maximum penalty, was the verdict of a jury today in superior court here for Lawrence Wiggins,
negro, charged with attempted assault
upon a Darien woman, the outgrowth of which caused the calling out of the Brunswick riflemen last night to prevent threatened mob violence here.

The negro filed a plea of not guilty.
The woman was called to the stand and positively identified him. In his statement, the negro admitted being in the vicinity of the woman's house, but denied the attempted assault. The trial was brief, the jury being out a few minutes when the verdict was brought in.

Immediately after the trial, Major Hartwell, in command of the troops here, escorted the negro out of the court and placed him in an automobile carefully guarded by soldiers. A squad of soldiers was detailed at the Darien bridge, and all traffic halted.
The bridge was closed to traffic for 15 minutes, sufficient time to allow the guards to carry the negro to Brunswick for safe keeping.

WRECKS 25 "KELLYS" BEFORE POLICEMAN HALTS HIS WORK

Philadelphia, September 17.—(AP)—
John Winn was arrested on a street corner today as he was busily demolishing straw hats, he had forcibly seized from men passengers on street
cars that stopped at the corner.

He would put his fist through the crowns and hang the wrecks on a convenient post. He had demolished 25 out-of-season hats, before a policeman arrived.

He was fined $10, paid it and said:
"It was worth it."

COOLIDGE GIVES GEORGIA LADY HIGH U. S. POST

Miss Jessie Dell, of Sylvania Appointed Member of Civil Service Commission.

WINS APPOINTMENT AFTER BITTER FIGHT

Opposed by Women on Account of Alleged Association With Anti-
Wilson Group.

Washington, September 17.—(AP)—

Miss Jessie Dell, of Georgia, was appointed a member of the United States
civil service commission today by President Coolidge. She succeeds the late Mrs. Helen Gardner.

Miss Dell is a democrat and her appointment carries forward the promotion policy of President Coolidge.
She has been chief of a division in the civil service commission and was supported for the appointment by H.
M. Lord, director of the budget; Senator Smoot, republican, Utah; Senator McKellar, democrat, Tennessee; and Miss Virginia White Speer, president of the League of Republican Women
of the District of Columbia.

Some opposition to her selection was laid before the president, part of it coming from democratic women
because of her reputed activities with the National Women's party during the picketing of the white house in 1917.

The new member is the second of the three commissioners to come up from the ranks, George R. Wales having advanced through various positions
from a minor clerkship to his present position.

MISS DELL'S HOME IS SYLVANIA.

Miss Dell is from Sylvania, Ga., and
at present is in government service.
She was recommended for the position
by Senator Smoot, of Utah.

The law requires that not more than two members of any one party shall serve on the commission at the same time. The two commissioners in office are William C. Deming, of Wyoming, and George R. Wales, of Vermont, both republicans.

Miss Dell was named after a bitter fight had been waged for the place
by friends of Miss Ethel M. Smith, head of the Women's Trade Union league; Mrs. Minnie Fisher Cunningham, of Texas, who it was said, was indorsed for the position by Mrs.
Gardner, whom she succeeds.

Opposed by Women.
In addition to being favored by President Coolidge, Miss Dell was recommended by Senator McKellar, of Tennessee, and by General H. M.
Lord, director of the budget.

Democratic women fought Miss Dell, it is said, because she belonged to the National Women's party at the time it burned President Wilson's speeches and messages to congress on LaFayette square. One of her chief supporters was Miss Alice Paul, head of the National Woman's party and organizer of the picket line that harassed Mr. Wilson while he was president.

It was not charged that Miss Dell looked on the demonstration as an assault against President Wilson, but was allied with the political group that did it. It is said Miss Dell described herself as an "anti-Wilson democrat."

MISS RUTH MELL DIES IN ACCIDENT

Atlanta Girl Killed When Automobile Overtakes
on Dixie Highway Near Dalton—Others Escape.

Dalton, Ga., September 17.—(Special).—Miss Ruth Mell, 23, of 49
Peachtree place, Atlanta, was killed
this afternoon about eight miles south of Dalton on the Dixie highway, when
the large sedan, driven by Mrs.
Blanche Mell, her mother, overturned
while attempting to pass another car.
It is stated, Miss Mell was accompanied by her mother and sister and were en route to Chattanooga to visit friends when the accident occurred.

In some manner, control of the car
was lost in the crash, the young woman was almost instantly killed.
The party was brought to the hospital here where the survivors are prostrated with grief. None of the other occupants of the car were seriously injured. No arrangements for the removal of the body to Atlanta
have been announced.

Miss Ruth Mell was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Mell and she lived with her mother and a sister, Miss Elizabeth Mell, at the home of Mrs. Mell's father, Major J. L. Mc-Cullum, 49 Peachtree place.

Major McCullum, a veteran in the service of the N. C. & S. L. railroad, was a member of the Old Guard party that left Atlanta Wednesday night for a trip to Cuba, and relatives were endeavoring Thursday night to get in touch with him before he sailed for Florida.

Paris and Berlin Agree Upon Basis For Security Pact

THEATER MERGER JOINS 700 HOUSES; HOWARD INCLUDED

Lasky, Balaban and Katz Interests Effect Combine Which Reaches All Parts of Nation.

New York, September 17.—(AP)—

The Famous Players-Lasky corporation tonight announced the separation of its theater interests from its production and distribution department through the organization of a new company, which will be entirely owned by Famous Players but under the management of the Balaban and Katz motion picture theater interests of Chicago.

This action will bring under one management about 700 motion picture shows scattered from Maine to California and from the Gulf of Mexico
to the Canadian border. The Famous Players organization owns, controls,
leases, operates, or has stock interest
in nearly 200 theaters and Balaban
and Katz are reported to control 500
others.

Among the more important theaters controlled by Famous Players are the Rialto and Rivoli in New York, the Howard theater in Atlanta, Ga., the McVickers in Chicago, the Playway in Boston and Grauman's and the Rialto in Los Angeles.

NO NEWS RECEIVED HERE AS TO MERGER.

J. J. Franklin, district manager of Famous Players-Lasky corporation,
who was in Macon Thursday night,
told a representative of The Constitution that the production and distribution departments of his organization always have been kept separate, but that he was not in position to discuss the new arrangement, as announced in the Associated Press dispatches from
New York.

Mr. Franklin stated that he did not know what effect, if any, the merger
would have on the Howard theater.
Famous Players-Lasky control the Howard and the Rialto in Atlanta and numerous other houses throughout the south.

ATLANTA LEADERS TO SUPPORT BONDS

Bolling H. Jones, Willis
A. Sutton and Robert L.
Foreman Indorse City Hall Project.

Strong endorsement of the proposed bond issue for a new city hall was expressed Thursday by three prominent Atlanta citizens, R. L. Foreman, prominent business man; Willis A.
Sutton, superintendent of city schools,
and Bolling H. Jones, former postmaster and chairman of the board of directors of the Fulton National bank.

All declared that now is the opportune time for the city of Atlanta to build this improvement, thus taking care of the future needs of the city as well as providing for present relief.

In the opinion of Mr. Foreman the greatest good to come from erection of the new city hall on the county-owned property at Hunter street and Central avenue would be in the elimination of all lines which now divide

Atlantans May Help Identify DR. SAMPSON'S WIDOW AND SON LIVE HERE Skeleton Found in Colorado

Boulder, Col., September 17.—(AP)—
The bleached skeleton of a man, believed to be that of the Rev. T. E.
Sampson of Austin, Texas, a close friend of Woodrow Wilson, who disappeared in Colorado at the time Dr.
Sampson, who was fond of hiking,
was lost in the dense Estes Park region.

The bones were found by two physicians, who were on a hike.
Shreds of clothing on them are said
to resemble those worn by Mr.
Sampson.

The Rev. Sampson had been vacationing at Grand Lake, Col., with his wife and son in 1915. One morning he set out alone to hike to Estes Park village. He was not seen again.

WIDOW AND SON NOW MAKING HOME IN ATLANTA.

Dr. Sampson, a widely known educator, was lost ten years ago while tramping from Grand Lake, Col., to the village of Estes Park, according to his son, Frank W. Sampson, of 39 Inman circle, Atlanta district representative of the Vibrolithic paving

CONCESSIONS MADE BY BOTH COUNTRIES

Treaty To Be Formally Drawn at Meeting in Lucerne, Switzerland, on October 5, Says Report.

BY CHARLES M. MCANN.

(Copyright, 1925, By United News.)
London, September 17.—For the first time in generations, Germany and France are in peaceful agreement.

The United News learns from a wholly authoritative source that the two nations have agreed upon a basic formula to guarantee peace between them by means of a Rhineland treaty.
Negotiations for a European security pact, carried on through regular diplomatic channels between Berlin and Paris, and the conference of allied and German legal experts in London, resulted in this agreement.

Fulfill Disarmament Clauses.
It also is authoritatively disclosed that Germany is faithfully and satisfactorily carrying out the disarmament clauses of the Versailles treaty.

France made great concessions toward a Franco-German agreement,
while the German attitude was surprisingly acceptable to the allies.

When the ministers meet in Switzerland—some from Geneva, says
the probable date of the meeting will be October 5, and the place Lucerne—
they will begin negotiations with a rough draft of the Rhineland pact, which already has been drawn, and on which all parties are agreed.

Reach Early Agreement.

It is hoped that the ministers will be able to reach agreement on final draft of the Rhineland treaty, whereupon only formal ratification would be required to effect the pacification
of that area of Europe as nearly as treaties can effect it.

The telegrams assert that old men,
women and children are not spared
in the name of humanity, if it will permit
an entire people to be removed from the disputed area before a decision regarding its future is announced.

The messages add that Goyan Christians "are being slaughtered," but give no details regarding any loss of life.

COUGHS UP PEN CAUGHT IN THROAT SINCE CHILDHOOD

Salem, Ore., September 17.—J. E.
Young, of this city, has just coughed
up a gold pen point which he swallowed when he was a small child.

The tip of the pen was in good condition, but the remainder was badly corroded, indicating the point had become lodged in his throat.

Young is 28 years old. He has been bothered with coughing fits and poor health since childhood.

Protests of Muscle Shoals Body Against Dams on Upper River Block Plans of Others.

Washington, September 17.—(AP)—
Applications by southern power companies for temporary permits to develop power projects on the upper Tennessee river above Muscle Shoals have been held up indefinitely by the federal power commission.

Protests over granting the permits were filed by the Muscle Shoals commission, on the grounds that the construction of dams on the Tennessee river and its tributaries would lessen
the power resources of Muscle Shoals
by the diversion of water.

Definite decision to hold up the application was reached at a recent cabinet meeting, when Acting Secretary of War Davis was called in to explain
the situation.

The commission pointed out in its protest that they were investigating the government's property at Muscle Shoals with the view to submitting recommendations to congress and that no new power projects should be developed on the Tennessee river pending the commission's report.

SPECIAL BOARD UPON AIRCRAFT MAPS PROGRAM Campaign To Boost To Outside World

Investigation of Whole Problem Probably To Get Under Way at Capital Next Monday.

DWIGHT MORROW NAMED CHAIRMAN

Colonel "Billy" Mitchell Certain To Be Called as Witness in Attempt To Substantiate Charges.

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.

Washington, September 18.—Sitting behind closed doors in the cabinet room at the white house, adjoining the president's office, the special aircraft board appointed by Coolidge mapped out its preliminary program Thursday for the investigation, whose results will have a strong influence upon the government's future policy regarding aviation.

The investigation probably will get under way next Monday at the capitol, it was announced after the meeting, the same date set for the beginning of the inquiry into the Shenandoah disaster at Lakehurst, N. J. The board will hold another session Friday to further complete its plans. It merely laid the groundwork Thursday.

Mitchell To Be Called.

Colonel William Mitchell, who presented the investigation by his sensational charges, will be called before the board, it was announced by Dwight W. Morrow, who was chosen chairman. It was learned that Mitchell probably will appear about a week after the inquiry begins. He will be given full opportunity to present all the evidence he desires regarding his charges of maladministration of aviation by the war and navy departments.

"The board plans to hear, first, the representatives of the air services of the army, navy and the postoffice as to their present condition, organization, equipment, condition, and the relation of the services to each other,"
a statement by the board said.

The board expects thereafter to invite numerous witnesses, including Colonel Mitchell, to appear before them with criticisms and constructive suggestions.

Sessions To Be Public.

The sessions of the board will be open. They will be held in the room of the house interstate and foreign commerce committee.

Just how significant a place the investigation of Mitchell will occupy in the investigation was indicated by the action of the board Thursday in examining the records of the hearings
before the special aircraft committee of the house last session. Particular attention was given, it was learned,
to the testimony of the fiery air officer.

The board assembled at the white house at 11 o'clock in the morning and was addressed, informally, by President Coolidge. Afterward the members selected their officers, choosing Dwight W. Morrow, a Wall street banker and close personal friend of the president, as chairman; Judge Arthur C. Denison, of Grand Rapids, Michigan, as vice chairman, and William F. Durand, of Los Angeles, aviation expert, as secretary. After lunch with the president, the board went into session again, the meeting lasting nearly four hours.

In his talk to the board President
Coolidge outlined the general purposes

INDIA COMMUNIST HOTLY PROTESTS BAN OF KELLOGG

Any Intention of Criticizing United States or Its Institutions, Denied (in Letter) to Consul.

London, September 17.—Shapurji

Saklatvala, communist member of the British parliament, wrote indignantly
to the United States consul general
Thursday protesting Secretary of State
Frank B. Kellogg's action in barring him from the United States.

Saklatvala disavowed any intention of criticizing the United States or its institutions during his attendance at the inter-parliamentary union session
in Washington and said that for that reason Kellogg's action was unjustified. The letter protested "against the assumption that the United States government has the right to scan the speeches of members delivered in parliaments of the various countries and to award reward or punishment according to your government's internal standards."

Reluctant to Believe.

In a statement to the public, Saklatvala said he "was reluctant to believe that the mere fact that a man was disliked by the British government was sufficient reason for interfering with the regular sessions of the inter-parliamentary union."

The Indian communist first announced he would not attend the union meeting but he subsequently went into conference with some of his parliamentary constituents in Battersea and, it is understood, was urged to go to Canada and to endeavor to slip into the United States despite the state department.

Is College Graduate.

There is little of the conventional communist about Saklatvala, although he is an inveterate speaker. He comes of a family of Bombay merchants. He is a college graduate.
For three years, Saklatvala explored
the Indian jungles for iron and coal.
As a result of these explorations, the Tata Iron and Steel company was founded in India. Until Wednesday Saklatvala was in the family firm of Tata Sons, and until he resigned
Wednesday he was a departmental manager of Tata, Ltd., of London.

Soon after he came to England,
Saklatvala joined the labor party,
but left it to become a communist.
When he could not persuade his cap-tades to affiliate with the Third Internationale after the war.

"We will have four objectives in our campaign," Mr. McFarland said.
"First, to raise the money; second,
to sell the community to its people;
third, to sell the real purpose of the Chamber of Commerce; and, fourth,
to create as strong civic spirit as possible."

Mr. Farland said that Atlanta in this campaign has a chance to get much more than a mere mention in the country if it succeeds. He said the $250,000 on a unit basis of $25 per member would represent a Chamber of 10,000 members. He said the largest Chamber of Commerce in the world is that in Los Angeles
with something like 9,000 members.
He said Atlanta has a chance to roll up the record of having the largest organization of this kind in the world if the $250,000 is raised.

This news, spread broadcast
throughout the world, would indicate that Atlanta is again on its toes, that the old Atlanta spirit has returned and everybody would know that Atlanta

mob of 100 persons, including many

Mulcahy, commander of the Irish Free State army, with rotten eggs
and other missiles as he emerged

DEKALB JURY ORDERS ORPHANAGE CLOSED

Decatur, Ga., September 17.—(Special.)—That the "Mother Goose Inn," an orphanage, located at Brookhaven, should be closed by the solicitor general as soon as possible, because of bad conditions found to exist there; that a new jail should be built in Decatur and that the Stone Mountain road should be completed to the Confederate monument, were the high lights contained in the recommendations of the DeKalb county grand jury, which adjourned today.

The presentments stated that all orphanages and similar institutions were found to be in good condition, except the Brookhaven orphanage. Of conditions found there the jury said that it had insufficient water; no ice; floors were dirty; insufficient bed covering and that general insanitary conditions prevailed.

Cyber recommendations of the jury were that R. H. Davis be appointed justice of the peace in the Stone Mountain district to succeed Judge McCurdy, deceased; that the county commissioner have a budget and that he also be enabled to borrow money in case the expenses exceed the budget. It was also recommended that the commissioner be paid a salary of $6,000 a year, also that he be allowed $300 a year to pay for vital statistics.

In recommending that a new jail be built, the grand jury reported that the present jail was found to be clean and sanitary, but that the present building is too small.

All roads and bridges were reported in good condition.

W. W. Freeborn was foreman of the grand jury.

Superior court which has been in session since September 7, was adjourned today by Judge John S. Hutcheson, who presided. Claude C. Smith, solicitor general, represented the state.

His hand had caused him considerable pain for several days, he said. He was taken to the hospital from a local hotel. His condition is not serious.

Mrs. Burroughs is held in police station.

BRITISH ARMS STAND SURPRISE TO LEAGUE

Geneva, September 17.—(AP)—The event in Geneva today which excited the greatest interest was Great Britain's opposition to any immediate inauguration of technical preparations by the League of Nations for a general disarmament conference. Sir Cecil Hurst, in the disarmament committee of the assembly, said it would be a great mistake to give a world-wide impression that the millennium has arrived and insisted that it would be preferable to go slow and leave the matter in the hands of the council.

The British stand provoked comment in the lobbies as being possibly connected with the desire credited to President Coolidge to have the disarmament conference held in Washington.

Sir Cecil told the committee that the league must not make another unsuccessful effort towards disarmament.

COOLIDGE, KELLOGG PICK JAPAN ENVOY

Washington, September 17.—(AP)—President Coolidge and Secretary Kellogg agreed today on the choice of a successor to the late Edgar A. Bancroft, ambassador to Japan. The name will be forwarded immediately to Tokyo for information as to the acceptability of the appointee.

Trade Lines Show Large Expansion In Fall Business

BY A. D. MANNING.

Continued optimistic reports for expansion of fall business are being received daily by Atlanta wholesalers and jobbers. Salesmen in the territory report a decided pickup in retail trade, and the demand for goods of all descriptions, is steadily increasing to meet the trade.

With the marketing of cotton, money is being more generally circulated, and is reaching the retailer.

"Fall business predictions are uniformly encouraging in all important trade centers of the Atlanta territory," said a leading jobber of Atlanta yesterday. "Our dealers are now buying more freely and there is a brisk pickup due in many cases to light stocks and an increased consumer demand."

"More favorable agricultural conditions throughout the Atlanta territory are also helping, and recent rains which have to some extent relieved drought conditions, have also materially been reflected in business."

"Holiday merchandise is already beginning to move. Orders are being placed for early November deliveries. Strictly fall lines of merchandise, however, are in most demand."

"Clothing, shoes, hats and ladies' goods are being delivered now in large quantities. The real fall or winter business is just beginning and present orders indicate a successful season."

Hotel registers, always a good index of business activity, show the majority of Atlanta hostels liberally filled with traveling salesmen from all parts of the country. These salesmen report increased business activity throughout the entire south. Conditions in other parts of the country are also held as most encouraging.

Atlanta retailers expect September sales to eclipse those of last year. Fall buying already is well under way, and the larger department stores report their business as highly satisfactory and anticipate a much larger volume during the next few weeks. Credit conditions are reported greatly improved.

John M. Harrington, Native of Georgia, Dies in New York

It's a happy task, too

Just as you select your draperies, you choose a pattern of Armstrong's Linoleum to suit each room: a daring Handcraft tile for the sun porch; a striking colored inset tile for the hall; perhaps a richly rippled Jaspé for the living-room; a quaint arabesque or Florentine mosaic for the bedroom. And within twenty-four hours the floors can be laid. No tacks, no brads—cemented firmly in place over a foundation layer of builders' deadening felt. The finished floor is free from ugly cracks or gaping seams. It's a lustrous surface, a comfortable surface; one that needs no scrubbing to keep brightly clean.

There's color, pattern, smartness to these new floors of Armstrong's Linoleum. Cost but a trifle—yet how they brighten rooms!

THE LOVE THAT SAVES: For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. John 3:16.

PRAYER:—“O Love that will not let me go, I rest my weary soul on Thee; Give Thine back the life I owe; That in Thine ocean depths its flow May richer, fuller be.”

THE FIRST STEP! Next Wednesday, 23d instant, Atlanta votes on the $2,000,000 municipal building bond issue.

Sentiment is so overwhelmingly in favor of this undertaking that there is no doubt that it will receive the approval of a vast majority of those who take enough interest in the matter to go to the polls.

There is the rub! Under the law controlling the bond election, the issue must be voted on by a majority of the registration, and it must receive the affirmative vote of two-thirds of those voting.

There is not the slightest doubt that two-thirds of those voting will favor the issue. The only danger is in not getting out a majority of the registration, which for this election is about 14,000. Thus 7,000 votes must be polled either for or against bonds, and if that many or more votes are cast in the bond election, two-thirds voting affirmatively for the bonds will authorize the issue.

So the thing to do now is to get out the votes—should be a very simple matter if the work is undertaken in an organized way.

Fortunately, the Atlanta Improvement association, a civic organization composed of many of Atlanta's most active and far-sighted business men from all parts of the city, all of them realizing the importance of this undertaking, is interesting itself in the matter of bringing out a full vote.

This organization is being ably assisted by leaders of the Atlanta Federation of Trades, the members of which are enthusiastically supporting the bond issue. The business men of Atlanta will know what this bond issue will mean in stimulating business, just as the laboring men know what its effect will be upon labor.

Not one in a hundred citizens who have expressed themselves on this subject to The Constitution have opposed this bond issue. The arguments in its favor are overwhelming, and practically the only argument advanced against it is that Atlanta needs other things now more than she does a city hall.

That is true—but the other things must come, too—and they will come if Atlanta goes at the matter in the old-time Atlanta spirit.

The next great project will be the Central avenue and Pryor street viaducts with their attendant improvements.

It is inevitable, also, that the city must do something, and very promptly, toward the abatement of its sewerage extension nuisances. The state law against the pollution of streams is explicit, and the city cannot longer tolerate the condition created by inadequate disposal plants, menacing the health of the value of their property.

The school extension work of the city has not yet been completed. Additional work must be done, and done soon, to the end of supplying the demand for adequate school facilities.

There must be further waterworks extension and improvements to give the people the full benefit of what is now Atlanta's best asset—its waterworks system—the value of which is splendidly attested by the fact that it has gone through this record-breaking drought without the slightest impairment of its service.

All these things can be done, and the sooner they are done the better it will be for the city.

Under the state constitutional bond limitation a city can issue bonds only to the extent of 7 per cent of its tax assessment.

As this assessment is always far below par valuation, the guarantee is absolute, even if the city were to issue bonds to its constitutional limit, that the burden would not be unreasonable, while the benefits would be incalculable.

The time has come when Atlanta must begin to bore with a bigger auger!

Like other progressive cities she must map out her plans for the future and build accordingly.

It is time to relegate the croakers and the mossbacks to the rear, and to once more enthuse our citizenship with the old-time fervor of the Atlanta spirit.

The first step is the municipal hall bond issue—and after that keep on stepping upward and onward until the city has met every reasonable requirement that is being supplied by any city of Atlanta's size the world over.

SAVANNAH CHOSEN.

The order to concentrate in Savannah the operating officials of the Seaboard Air Line, and their staffs, means much for that port city.

The Seaboard owns a great deal of property in that city, including the Hutchinson island terminals, which are worth millions of dollars.

A holding company, which is a subsidiary of the railroad corporation, owns vast properties in western Savannah which are capable of development, and it is said, will be shortly developed. The order to move the operating officials of the system points the way to this end.

It is a great compliment to Savannah that that city should have been chosen as the headquarters from which a system that reaches from the east now deep into Florida's peninsula, and across the south Atlantic almost to the middle west, shall be operated. It will mean a great deal more than the moving of several hundred new people to that city. It undoubtedly will mean a port development, especially in coastwise trade, of marked potentiality.

The concentration of these forces in Savannah has statewide significance.

Atlanta rejoices with Savannah in this achievement, and congratulates Mayor Bob Hull in the conspicuous part he played in the transfer order.

SAKLATVALA BARRED.

This government acted wisely in barring India's revolutionary leader, although a member of the British parliament, from entry into this country. He is a notorious communist, sent to parliament by a radical constituency—a dangerous firebrand and insurrectionist in that body, and infinitely better off out of America than in it.

His name is Saklatvala, but that doesn't matter. Nobody cares for the name. It is what the man who bears the name represents, and the hazards of his speech and practices once in America and turned loose in an impressionable group of Bolsheviks of which we have entirely too many.

He was a designated delegate to the international parliamentary union. Turned loose in such a body it might be like flying sparks on a fire trap.

The dark-hued radical of the land of “hoo-dooism” has probably found that not even the wand of a Hindu magician can open the portals of this land of democracy to one whose chief aim in life is to stir up strife, and overthrow constitutional authority.

Back to India for this radical—or back to the haunts of the Lenin and Trotsky, and the rest of the tribe!

THE VICE PRESIDENT.

Vice President Dawes will be in Atlanta in October and address the business men of the city at a chamber of commerce forum luncheon. He will, it is hoped, also visit the Southeastern fair, which will be in progress at the time.

Judging from recent addresses of Mr. Dawes he will recount here his reasons for urging a change in the archaic and time-killing rules of the senate.

In an address at Portland, Oregon, a day or two ago the vice president completely answered one of the arguments against limiting senate debate. That is that such limitations would lead to more laws. He quoted from the records to show that in the past ten years the senate had actually passed more laws than the house, although the latter body operates under majority cloture. Certainly there can be no further pressure therefore of such a silly argument.

It is not probable that the rules will be changed. The senate is too much of a law unto itself, and it is contrary to senatorial license to have any kind of a cloture prevail. But whether they change them or not, and whatever may be the excuses of those who profess to see sectional hazards in such a change, the country is with the vice president. Furthermore, the people admire a fighter who does not quit. The vice president may not be an adroit politician, but he has convictions and is not frightened off on conflicting paths, or bulldozed by party leaders who track conventional lines.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

THE OPTIC OF TAURUS.

The best doctor, viz., we regulars, make some mistakes, as the fact-heads constantly remind the eye prospector. I, too, without any knowledge, or worse, with brilliant complaint, am wont to call regular physicians “allopaths.” There is not now and never has been an “allopathic” school or system or mode of practice; that is merely an epithet invented by followers of isms and pathies of various complexions who naturally desired to stigmatize all physicians who declined to switch off the main line and follow the one-track side issue of the moment. No well-educated physician or healer acknowledges himself restricted or bound by the tenets or theories of any pathy, ism or school of healing; such a trick is for the narrow-gauge mind and it appeals to the uninformed or the misinformed. In shooting the bull day in and day out, month after month and year after year, one not equipped with a silencer is bound to make a mistake occasionally. I have such a mistake to confess today. No doubt some important correspondent distracted my attention from the game or made some erroneous remark about allopathy or the doctors' trust just as I took aim. Anyhow the sad news has come that I hit poor Taurus squarely in the optic, and like the nine such mistakes, I hope to hit it. What's a $25 fine in a game like this?

Miss R. H. M. deposes and says that she is a citizen of God's country, 12 years of age and no longer about it, a semi-invalid (perhaps more in the spirit than in the flesh) and she testifies as follows, to-wit:

“There has been so much said about ‘cri’ that I am prompted to write you what I am cured of the ‘caching cold’ phobia by reading your articles. What joy and comfort that has brought into my life cannot be expressed in mere words.

“You have wiped away many fears and corrected erroneous ideas which burdened my mind and hampered my life. The first enlightenment I received was when I wrote you about ‘Little Mary's Letter.’

“Of course I will say I must be strong and blessed with unusually good resisting power and all that, but quite the contrary, I am anything but strong. I am rather frail in build, low weight, and generally thin-skinned and delicate in constitution. If I were resistance counted as the ‘old fogies’ claim, I should be a ready victim for all the medical colleges of the world.

The young woman goes on to enumerate the dreadful things she does—sitting out on the damp ground, ignoring drafts, going out immediately after a shower and before her hair is dry, wearing as little clothing as she pleases at any time, etc., etc.

Whatever the dangerous thing called ‘caching cold’ may be, it is a darned thing, but I surely like it, even the East Wind.”

How come this convert nursed her fallacies and phobias for twenty years or more under the care of her physician? She explains that, too:

“Why did I not ask my family doctor? I never thought to ask him because that would be a display of ignorance. I took for granted everything I was told by parents and other friends. Without studying astronomy or medicine or the care of the human body, I was told by parents and other friends that I was ‘caching cold’ from a draft or from getting wet or chilled in the course of the regular life of a young woman. I was told that I was ‘caching cold’ from a draft or from getting wet or chilled in the course of the regular life of a young woman. I was told that I was ‘caching cold’ from a draft or from getting wet or chilled in the course of the regular life of a young woman.

“Doctor, I don't think you fathom the misery and unhappiness that was passed on to us from our unenlightened relatives and friends when we were growing up.

Well, maybe not, but I have seen enough to wait until that bull turns his other eye this way.

Saving at the Bung And Losing at the Spigot

Editor Constitution: Most timely and heartening was your editorial this morning entitled “Fine Cooperation.” It was well said that “farm and home demonstration agents in the drought-stricken counties are working out problems based upon actual conditions.”

These difficult conditions call for more intelligent and scientific directions of all farm and home activities and emphasize the need of these trained leaders in every suffering section. The greater the difficulties the greater the need.

But the very situation is causing many “county authorities” to consider the advisability of dispensing with the federal farm demonstration agents in the interest of “economy.” False economy would be, we hear of some counties in the midst of the drought-stricken section where the “county authorities” have refused to renew the extra levy provided under the act of 1922 for the purpose of employing farm and home demonstration agents.

There has been a time when the services of these agents were more urgently needed, and you will do a great service if you will in your columns call attention to the dangerous policy of this kind of economy.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

New York, September 17.—A prominent night club owner says that his manager, headwaiter and doorman can spot a lady and gent from the wide open spaces in a second. And this despite the fact that said couple may be highly camouflaged in up-to-the-minute Fifth avenue habiliments. He says they lack the savoir-faire, the nonchalant ease of the born Gothamites.

But if you should make a close study and a thorough analysis of this vaunted New York conquering manner, this magic behavior which opens all doors of forbidden and exclusive places, you would agree that there is nothing refined or subtle about it, but rather a coarse, rude, common brutal, rascally, I would say almost brutal, display of superiority about it.

And that's exactly why most doormen at cabarets and night clubs look like retired prize fighters or things just out of the clink. You don't need such individuals at the door to keep the genteel stranger out. These pugilistic, pug-nosed, dressed-up flunkies are there to impress the native.

The toughest dump is not the one glittering with electric signs and entrance hall with subdued romantic lights but is generally a plain brown stone mansion, unobtrusive by a dozen houses of the same pattern. The blinds are tightly drawn and the taxi that brings a late of midnight revelers hastily discharges and rushes away pell-mell. A bar is withdrawn, a few words are passed and the party is ushered inside and the street assumes once more the aspect of a residential section in a manufacturing city.

Not even the cop who saunters along has the slightest notion that he has just passed a night club. He is a yapping, tooting, dancing, drinking, stumbling, fighting crowd of half-crazed men and women unaware that night has long since fled and that its dawn in the world outside.

Though the Russian Eagle's presiding genius has left New York for Hollywood, and the restaurant was beginning to suffer in prestige because its chief attraction was its manager, a former Russian general, there are two new Russian establishments in the forties, that will go the Russian general a few grades better. The “Russian Swan,” opens tonight with five countesses among the hostesses, two princesses somewhere in the administrative forces, one duke to wash dishes and five former naval officers to take your orders.

A colored employee of the Hotel Marwood died the other day and his death according to one of his associates was due to “rumtzu.” He thought it was rum—and it wasn't.

A favorite pastime for the leisure class and its hangers-on are trips up the Hudson these breezy nights in which imagination must help to supply a touch of romanticism. One of these excursions ran into a little cove about midnight and the boys and girls pretended they were stranded on a desert island. Bonfires were lighted and the ship's locker was brought ashore. Of course no ship sails without a rum supply for the old salts in the crew and the bottles were duly opened.

The campfires were already dying down to a faint flicker and dawn was peeping over the hills when it was discovered that the savages who had been creeping nearer all night from the dense jungle in the background were nothing but a couple of dry law enforcers.

Frank Sullivan, one of New York's most prolific and clever writers is as quiet as a mouse when in company. Another scribe, commenting on the trait of character in the versatile rank, said that it was due to Frank's saving qualities. “He does not say any clever things on purpose. If he thinks of any he saves them up and writes them down later. He feels he has a greater audience in the papers.”

Long Island motion picture studios have it over Hollywood in one respect, says Margaretta Tuttle, who knows both places and who wrote Milton Sills' new picture, “On Long Island they have at least two directors who can talk to you without an interpreter, that's more than Hollywood can say just at present.”

A Saturday night in the Italian section of the East side will convince you that even if anything should happen to Rudy or Ramon, which God forbid, there are plenty of young gentlemen who come so close in looks to these two sheiks, that they could almost pass for doubles.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

Hard To Be A Pacifist.

The Nation's inquiring reporter in Shanghai interviewed eight persons on the significance of the strike in that city and reports that not a single one of the natives he saw supported the strike. He held that the strike had been forced upon the natives by the foreigners. He said that the strike had been forced upon the natives by the foreigners. He said that the strike had been forced upon the natives by the foreigners.

The Chinese to gain control of the foreigner's territory, he said, would be to gain control of the foreigner's territory. He said that the strike had been forced upon the natives by the foreigners. He said that the strike had been forced upon the natives by the foreigners.

A cultured Chinaman, of pacifist views, told the reporter how difficult it was to remain a pacifist in the face of the insults and lordly manners of the foreigner. He cited an instance in which he remonstrated with a Sikh policeman, who was arbitrarily interfering with some rickshaw men. The English policeman was taking the rickshaw man's license away and the latter was crying. The cultured Chinese had witnessed the whole scene and advanced with the words: “If you hit me, I will hit you.”

The English policeman said that he would never treat your countrymen as you are treating these rickshaw men. The Sikh was cooling down and was about to say something when he was interrupted by the English policeman. He said that the strike had been forced upon the natives by the foreigners. He said that the strike had been forced upon the natives by the foreigners.

“What are you doing here interfering with this policeman? Don't argue with him. You're not a policeman. You're nothing but a damned Chinaman. Get out of here.” And the Chinaman added to the reporter: “They said that to me in China.”

ROOSEVELT PARTY

Postpones Hunt For Rare Sheep

Chicago, September 17.—(AP)—Search for the Ovis poli, the Marco Polo sheep, which is the objective of the James Simpson-Roosevelt expedition, has been temporarily abandoned, Kermit Roosevelt, who with his brother, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, led the expedition, has written the Field museum here.

The animals changing wool are in poor condition at this time of year. The party, having safely passed across the Himalayas after a hard trip reaching an altitude of 18,700 feet, will go first into the Tibetan mountains and return from there to the Pamirs, haunts of the rare animal.

“Three curried, a wild ‘blue’ sheep of the high Tibetan plains, 2000 feet above the sea level, and a number of marmots and birds have been bagged by the party, said letters from Kermit to James Simpson, patron of the expedition, and Stanley Field, president of the Field museum. The personnel of the party are in the best of health, Kermit wrote, although the passage of the mountains killed 14 ponies and one of the best dogs died of sunstroke.

Writing July 10 from Pasang to Stanley Field, Kermit said: “The drop down from the great heights to these hot plains was very hard on man and dogs, although it was most pleasant to see trees again after a long absence. We were not so much as a stunted bush.”

ATLANTA LESSEE HELD NOT LIABLE FOR TAX PAYMENT

The lessee is not liable for payment of taxes, as taxes are not usually payable by the lessee, therefore cannot be classified as bills due, the court of appeals decided Thursday in the case of the McClure Realty and Investment company.

The case involved the lease of downtown Atlanta property by the McClure company, the company agreeing to pay for all street paving or sidewalk improvements, water, sewerage, and all bills of whatsoever nature.

Judge Ellis, of Fulton superior court, held that under terms of the lease contract the lessee was not liable for the taxes, but the court of appeals Thursday reversed the trial court's decision.

Hope for Dry Nation Pinned By Federal Church Council Upon Recent Reorganization

Church Report Asserts Enforcement Has Not Been Taken Seriously by Revenue Department.

Washington, September 17.—(AP)—A hope that the recent prohibition reorganization may end an enforcement regime which "has left very much to be desired" was expressed tonight by the research and education department of the Federal Council of Churches in a comprehensive review of dry law enforcement.

The resume, which was a part of the department's special report on the social consequences of prohibition, declared among other things that after making all due allowances for the difficulty of the task, it was impossible to avoid the conclusion that prohibition enforcement "under the bureau of internal revenue has, until recently, been undertaken with much less seriousness than the situation demanded."

It was asserted also that the prohibition unit "has undoubtedly given the impression of a propaganda bureau, and this impression has cost it something in respect and cooperation; that a certain demoralization" of the prohibition work of the justice department has arisen from various complications; and that Secretary Mellon, who "has never been a prohibitionist," has failed to give to the prohibition enforcement campaign the same kind of leadership he has contributed to the conduct of other official duties.

In addition, prohibition agents, like other government employees, were said to be underpaid and congressional appropriations "delinquent" while a still further complication was presented by the disposition in congress and elsewhere to regard prohibition appointments as political patronage.

President Wilson was opposed to the Volstead act and was unable to give attention to its enforcement, the report continued, and President Harding encouraged a "hands-off" policy on the part of responsible treasury officials, so that "it has remained for the present administration to develop a strong policy which, however tardy it may be, inspires new hope."

Mellon Criticized. After pointing out that Secretary Mellon "has until recently held distasteful properties," and that as a financier he has been absorbed primarily in business questions, the report declares he "has seriously disappointed the friends of prohibition by failing to develop a vigorous policy and to assume responsibility for it."

"There has been no indication that the responsible administrative officers of the government have given the requirements of more effective prohibition enforcement anything like adequate attention," the report continued. "All along the line the history of enforcement discloses lack of leadership and conviction in places where they would have been most effective."

"This picture has now, however, been relieved by the coming of the new policy of the government with reference to the national prohibition act through the appointment of General Lincoln C. Andrews as assistant secretary of the treasury, carrying responsibility for supervising the customs, the coast guard and the prohibition unit. No final judgment can be pronounced on the enforcement situation until the new policy has been fairly tried. Certainly the initial effect of the change has been wholesome. It should be said also that the new regime has the full approval and support of the secretary of the treasury and the commissioner of internal revenue. Without such approval the plan could not have been put into effect."

"It seems safe to predict that if the efforts of the federal government do not meet with a considerable measure of success, there will be a lessening of administrative pressure to secure appropriations for prohibition and enforcement and an increasingly receptive attitude on the part of congress toward proposals for a modification of the Volstead act."

The review follows, in part:

Much Desired. It must be said frankly that our more than five years' experience with national prohibition has left very much to be desired in the way of law enforcement efforts. There has been much discussion of the wisdom and efficiency of the arrangement whereby the enforcement of the prohibition law is made the responsibility of the department of justice, limited to the detection of violations, the gathering of evidence and the preparation of cases for presentation to the department of justice, which has no responsibility for trying them in the courts. This division of responsibility is, however, not so illogical as it seems to the person who has made no study of federal administration. By far the larger part of crime detection work under the federal laws is carried on here where the department of justice, for example, the treasury department has agents for the detection of counterfeiting; the postoffice department has a highly trained corps of investigators engaged in detecting violations of the postal laws; and until the prohibition law went into effect the enforcement of liquor laws was, so far as the federal government was concerned, chiefly a matter of collecting revenues, and enforcement activities were organized on that principle. It was most logical when the eighteenth amendment became effective to build up the machinery for enforcement of the national prohibition act around the existing organization in the bureau of internal revenue, which is organized under the department of the treasury.

At one angle is the unit itself which, from the point of view of treasury officials, has organized its work too largely on a crusading basis with an excess of publicity and with perhaps a disproportionate emphasis upon the penal features of a law whose strict enforceability higher government officials have been inclined to doubt. The prohibition unit has undoubtedly given the impression of a propaganda bureau and this impression has cost it something in respect and cooperation.

At another angle of the enforcement triangle is the department of justice which has full responsibility for the prosecution of prohibition cases. The department has suffered a veritable inundation of these cases and has been somewhat dismayed at the displacement of other important work by an enormous number of petty cases. The preparation of the cases by prohibition agents has often been inadequate and not a few cases have been lost or not pressed because of incompetence or corruption on the part of their courts into police courts, which in some cases is an inevitable result of enforcement of the Volstead act. A certain demoralization of the work of the department of justice has resulted, and fraud and corruption have found their way into the offices of federal attorneys. The assistant attorney general in charge of prohibition cases has been urging more attention to big and important cases and has also objected seriously to the policy of the prohibition unit in depending on "libel" proceedings to stop violations in de-alcoholizing plants and bonded warehouses—a policy which requires that a United States marshal take over the plant at considerable expense and leave it in charge of guards who at once become a target for bribes. A controversy over this and related subjects has arisen between the department and the prohibition unit. The dispute over "libel" proceedings is fortunately now settled.

and nuisances are to be dealt with summarily under provisions of common law.

Officers Responsible. Finally, there is the commissioner of internal revenue and, over him, the secretary of the treasury. These are the officers of the government chiefly responsible for prohibition enforcement. The commissioner has naturally looked upon prohibition as just one responsibility among many. He has eleven units under his direction and he has not felt called upon to crusade in the interest of one of them. He appears to feel that the permissive and regulatory functions of the bureau prescribed by the national prohibition act with reference to the growing alcohol industry were just as important as the prohibitory features and much more practicable.

The secretary of the treasury has never been a prohibitionist. Indeed, it is merely recording a known fact to say that he has until recently held distasteful properties. They represent, of course, only a fraction of his extensive investments, and it has been authoritatively stated that he took early steps to liquidate these properties after assuming his present office. In any case, the private investment of the secretary of the treasury is not in himself a warrant an attack upon his administration of the prohibition laws, but the ownership of these properties helps to explain his attitude.

As a financier, he has been absorbed in matters which are of paramount interest to the business community. He has a mandate from business to guide the financial policy of the country in what are deemed to be safe channels. He has no mandate from business to enforce prohibition in places where the business community to which the secretary of the treasury belongs has given little reason to think that it was at all concerned over the enforcement of the prohibition laws—except perhaps when they become inconvenient. The secretary of the treasury has seriously disappointed the friends of prohibition by failing to develop a vigorous policy and to assume responsibility for it. He has enjoyed a unique position of influence and one can hardly doubt that if he had assumed a function of the leadership with reference to this great government problem that he has given to national finance, the country would have responded.

Question Not Necessary. It is not the purpose of this report to question personal motives, nor is it necessary to do so. The fact remains that until comparatively recently no effort of any consequence was made to deal with the smuggling situation, which became a national scandal; that in the very beginning of the granting of permits governing the movement of liquors and of industrial alcohol, abuses of the permit privilege have been allowed to go without notice for long periods of time; that "breweries," whose large-scale operations it should have been a comparatively simple matter to watch have put large quantities of beer supposedly intended for de-alcoholizing, directly on the market in defiance of the law; that alcohol has been diverted to beverage use in enormous quantities; that the enforcement of the prohibition law is ineffectual administration of the law. The very success of the recent campaign of the coast guard in breaking down the "rum run" has demonstrated the ineffectiveness of the government in its previous failure to grapple with the problem.

Testimony given at the hearings before the senate investigating committee already referred to brought out the fact that alcohol had been obtained on forged permits amounting in one case to 550 barrels, in another to 785 barrels, in another to 790 barrels, and in the famous Fleischman case to 454,374 proof gallons. The tax in this latter case due to the government, over and above what had been paid, amounted to $1,824,374.75. The suit was compromised at $75,000. There was no evidence of collusion nor does it appear with any certainty that the bureau could have made a case in the courts. They were troublesome, technical questions involved, explained by the chairman of the prohibition unit, who said to the committee: "I had no doubt in my mind but that, as a matter of moral certainty, the spirit alleged to be in the law, had it been diverted, or the great bulk of them, had in fact been diverted to beverage uses. That was my conviction then and it is my conviction now. This was just as it is in hundreds of cases that come to me, cases wherein I am confident from all the attendant facts and circumstances that there has been a violation of the law. Yet such cases are found to be wholly wanting in what would be judicial proof for the establishment of the facts. But what could be established under the rules of evidence in a court where the case would probably finally land was a different matter." There would have been fewer cases, however, where such obstacles were encountered in efficient and corrupt agents had been more promptly removed and more vigorously dealt with.

Congress Plays Role. The role played by congress in this matter is an important part of the picture. It has not been clear, and is not yet clear, how far congress should go in making federal appropriations for prohibition enforcement, but the absolute necessity of strengthening the coast guard was painfully apparent long before it was undertaken. The position of congress has been peculiar. It has been continuously "dry" in sentiment, and apparently determined to maintain the Volstead act, yet has been slow to accept the consequences in terms of appropriations. If congress, however, has been delinquent in this matter, it must be recognized that no such administration pressure was exerted in this connection as the country became familiar with in relation to the tax program sponsored by the treasury department. When the coast guard situation was at length truthfully dealt with, the treasury gave cordial approval to a liberal appropriation. But the failure to deal promptly with the situation strengthened the impression built up from a number of circumstances that the higher officials of the treasury department were not taking prohibition seriously.

This picture has now, however, been relieved by the coming of the new policy of the government with reference to the national prohibition act through the appointment of General Lincoln C. Andrews as assistant secretary of the treasury, carrying responsibility for supervising the customs, the coast guard, and the prohibition unit. No final judgment can be pronounced on the enforcement situation until the new policy has been fairly tried. Certainly the initial effect of the change has been wholesome. The public has gained a distinct impression of a long process—straightforward methods, strict discipline, less waste motion, more action and less advertisement. It should be said also that the new regime has the full approval and support of the secretary of the treasury and the commissioner of internal revenue. Without such approval the plan would not have been put into effect. The authority of the new assistant secretary of the treasury is not statutory, but is a matter of administrative policy. Whatever their past delinquencies, the treasury officials are entitled to full cooperation in their present efforts, and to credit for a serious intention to enforce the law.

It is perhaps only fair to add that the question of administrative responsibility has been complicated by the fact that our experience of national prohibition, brief as it has been, has included portions of the administrations of three presidents. Mr. Wilson was opposed to the Volstead act and was not able to give any attention to its enforcement. Mr. Harding, until near the end of his life, was apparently disposed to handle prohibition matters personally, while at the same time contenting himself with the policy worked out by the prohibition unit. Such a course inevitably encouraged a "hands off" attitude on the part of the responsible treasury officials. It has remained for the present administration to develop a strong policy which, however tardy it may be, inspires new hope.

The essential features of the new plan are as follows: Instead of two fairly distinct enforcement organizations there is now one. Hitherto, there has been a force of agents organized under state directors known as "federal prohibition directors," and a force of general agents, sometimes referred to as the "mobile force," organized under "divisional chiefs" who supervised the work in wider areas. There has been no clear distinction between the functions of these two forces. The "mobile force" has been counted on to make cases where collusion is suspected involving the local agents. But the system has not worked smoothly and has occasioned much friction, because of overlapping functions and responsibilities. The new plan puts all agents under 24 "prohibition administrators" of the secretary of the treasury in federal judicial districts. This will not only simplify administration but will facilitate cooperation with the department of justice through the several district attorneys. Such cooperation is manifestly essential.

Further, the new plan is based upon decentralization of responsibility, whereas the former plan gave responsibility very largely at Washington. Every administrator is to have a free hand in the enforcement of the law, and the minimum features of the law, and will be held strictly accountable for results. A distinctive feature of General Andrews' administration will be the assistance and stimulus given to local enforcement. The collection of liquor taxes with, as heretofore, be directly under the collectors of internal revenue, but law enforcement will be in the hands of the district administrators. The headquarters staff will exercise fewer administrative and more supervisory functions, but will continue, of course, to be an essential part of the organization.

From the point of view of the federal government, prohibition is now on a serious trial. The government intends to make a huge effort to enforce the law, but there are no illusions in administration circles as to the difficulties. The attitude of Washington on this subject may be gathered in substance from President Coolidge's Memorial day address in which he said that the philosophy of prohibition is not the nation's must, and insisted that what we need is "not more federal government but better local government." Underlying this policy of decentralization is the firm purpose to make the people themselves bear the moral responsibility for government. Its philosophy is summed up in the president's aphorism: "If we are too weak to take charge of our own morality we shall not be strong enough to take charge of our own liberty."

Palmer Is Again Loser in Battle With Ship Board

Washington, September 17.—(AP)—The shipping board today again overruled President Palmer of the fleet corporation in the matter of ship sales.

By a three-to-three vote, it failed to affirm the recommendation of Mr. Palmer that four ships operated by the Munson Steamship company as the Pan-American Line, be sold to that company for $3,080,000. Commissioner Haney, whose repeated efforts to have Mr. Palmer removed from office have brought a request from President Coolidge for his resignation, which he refused, was one of the three voting against the sale. Chairman O'Connor and Commissioner Thompson were understood to have voted with him. Commissioner Haney announced afterward that he cast his vote in the negative only after the board defeated, 4 to 2, his motion to delay consideration of the bids until Commissioner Benson could be present.

It was the second time that the board declined to concur in President

Palmer's recommendations, it having turned back to the fleet corporation some weeks ago offers for 200 ships for scrapping. The negotiations were reopened and the ships were subsequently sold to Henry Ford.

Advanced From $90 to $150 A Month Within Year After Course In The Southern Business College

Many Will Enroll Next Week for Business Courses at the Southern

One of the reasons why a very large majority of those who have acquired a Business Education have done so at the Southern Shorthand & Business University, is that the students of this well-known school are eminently successful.

Yesterday a representative from perhaps the largest firm in the South called upon the Southern for six accountants and stenographers. In the mails were applications from firms in Moultrie and Jacksonville for male stenographers.

The thorough training given at the Southern enables its pupils to advance rapidly in the business world. J. R. Chambers, whom the Employment Department sent, last November, to a position with the important law firm of Colonel Lewis Hall, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., has just informed the Southern that his salary has been increased several times since he went with the firm.

"I began last November at $90 a month and am now receiving $150 a month," Mr. Chambers writes in his recent letter.

The outstanding advantages of the Southern Business College over any other Business School in the state are its large, well-lighted, ventilated and handsomely equipped quarters, its superb location, being away from the noise, smoke and dust of the railroads and streets, and, at the same time, right in the heart of Atlanta; its large faculty, being composed of from two to three times as many teachers as are employed by any other Business School in this city; its excellent discipline, which has received the commendation of one of Atlanta's most

DIXIE SERIES

Panthers Need Just One More Game; Grid Season May Conflict With Series

BY JULIAN GRIFFIN.

If the Fort Worth Panthers, champions of the Texas league for the past six years, win one of the three remaining games with Dallas this week, which is very likely, the "little world's series" between Fort Worth and Atlanta, pennant winners of the Southern association, will start Tuesday or Wednesday of next week, in either Atlanta or Fort Worth, Texas, the exact time and place to be decided later.

The work of the Cracker is over, so far as the Southern association crown is concerned. Bert and Nick and Pug and all the rest have chased the "mathematical possibility" down to the vanishing point; they have put up a gallant fight to ride home in front of all opposition, to crash all barriers. The next two games on the schedule will be more formal—just playing out the schedule.

Fort Worth defeated Dallas, 10 to 3, yesterday for the second victory in as many days, and it is a lead pipe cinch that the Panthers will win one of the three games left in the play-off to decide the winner of the second half of the Texas league race. Fort Worth easily won during the first half of the season so it does not require much temerity to declare in print that Atlanta will meet Fort Worth in the Dixie series next week.

Details Practically Complete. President Michalove, of the Cracker, has held a conference with President Martin, of the Southern association, and all details have been arranged with reference to the Martin loop.

When Fort Worth wins one more game, President Martin will meet the president of the Texas league and final arrangements will be ready for the press, probably Sunday.

It will be a seven-game series, awarded to the first team that chalks up four victories.

The series will open Tuesday or Wednesday. A flip of the coin will decide which town gets the opening game. Two games will be played in the town winning the toss; then a lapse of one day and three games in the other town. The sixth and seventh games, if necessary, will be played one in each town.

Lapse Between Towns. It is a 24-hour ride from Atlanta to Fort Worth, so a lapse of one day will be necessary between each shift of scenery. A large number of fans have signified their intentions of accompanying the team on the invasion of Texas. Atlanta fans are bickering over the first pennant since 1919, and the fact that Bert Niehoff is the only manager in the Southern who has conquered the Texas winners adds further optimism and encouragement.

There is a possibility that Atlanta and Fort Worth will play at Spiller's Oglethorpe on the Grand field, gridiron, Saturday, September 26.

If Fort Worth wins another game this week and the first games are played in the Texas league team Tuesday and Wednesday, then games will

PIRATES NEED SEVEN WINS FOR FLAG

Chicago, September 17.—(AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates, in knocking off the Boston Braves while the New York Giants were idle, increased their lead in the National league pennant race to seven full games. The Pirates have 12 more games left on their schedule, and in order to clinch the pennant need only seven more victories. This would give them 85 wins and 59 losses for an average of .587. The Giants have 14 more games to play and if victorious in all of them they still would fall short of Pittsburgh.

The standing tonight:

Team	Won	Lost	Pct.
Pittsburgh	88	54	.620
New York	80	60	.571

The Washington Senators lost one-half a game to the Philadelphia Athletics today when they broke even with Detroit in a double-header while Philadelphia defeated Chicago.

The world's champions now hold a lead of seven and one-half games over their rivals. In order for Washington to clinch the pennant they will have to win nine more of their remaining 16 games. The average then would be .688 won and 56 lost, for a percentage of .636. Philadelphia could win all of its remaining 15 games without displacing the Senators.

The standing tonight:

Team	Won	Lost	Pct.
Washington	89	49	.645
Philadelphia	82	57	.590

PANTHERS COP MRS. CAVET BELIEVES 'CHARM' SECOND GAME HELPED ATLANTA WIN FLAG

WIFE OF CRACKER STAR AIDS HUSBAND

BY H. H. WIMPEE.

Superstition, that vague, uncomfortable state of mind, shared by a large number of baseball magnates and others engaged in sporting activities, is not confined alone to the realm of those who actually take part in various games of chance, but apparently has a large and representative following among those who view from the sidelines and who share in the sweet bliss of victory.

For example, Mrs. Tilar "Pug" Cavet, wife of the Cracker's foremost pitching luminary, is a strong adherent to rabbit-foot luck and believes in strict observance of certain hoodoo charms, which she earnestly insists upon being observed by her husband's elongated husband in conquering the opposition from the mound.

There is no more rabid baseball fan to be found in Atlanta than Mrs. Cavet. She has viewed every game the Cracker has played here since her husband donned a local uniform to hurl Atlanta to the pennant. Each day she is in the grandstand, wearing the same dress and attire, has her guests the same trio of women friends, and she is the same old pug in the same old pug.

To vary from this custom would mean certain defeat for the Cracker, Mrs. Cavet believes. But let her tell the story in her own words, original way as she did to one of her guests.

"While everybody is applauding the Cracker for their remarkable playing that won the pennant," she said, "I think a little of the credit should be handed me for working a mesmeric charm over the Pelicans. If it hadn't been for this charm there might have been a different story to tell."

Believes in Luck. "Do I believe in Lady Luck and her kindred spirits?" she replied in answer to the question. "I'll say I do. I sat out there last week and worked twice as hard as my husband, dispelling demons of ill luck and, of course, we had to win those games."

"I suppose those who noticed me wearing the same dress and hat every time they saw me were because I had only one outfit. A closet full of clothes is woman's greatest attraction, with the possible exception of a handsome husband or sweetheart. Therefore, I am certainly due a little credit in forsaking my pride by wearing the same clothes every day. Every little movement must be identical the same each day in order to prevent breaking the charm."

"In addition to occupying the same seats every afternoon, we engaged the same cushions, shared the same subject of conversation, rode the same street car and from the game, bought a dope at exactly 3:35 o'clock from the same boy, and yelled the same words of encouragement to the team. If you don't believe that system will work, try it out some time."

The Cracker's first victory over second to center, scoring Niehoff and Cullup and sending Smith to third. Brains brought in the fourth run. Jenkins, suckered Yarnan into the second to center, was attempted to steal the sack and Smith scored the fourth run and final Cracker run before Jenkins was caught in the chase between first and second.

THE PEARL HEADED PIN

BY ROY VICKERS

INSTALLMENT XII.

JOAN HOLDS OFF THE INSPECTOR.

Some fifteen minutes later Joan was shown into Rason's private room and given a chair. She waited with inward impatience while Rason told her it was a fine morning, that it was very good of her to come so promptly, and that he little thought when last he saw her that he would next meet her in the yard itself.

"He's found mother out somewhere," Joan told herself, "and he's a bit shy. Better keep him as shy as possible."

She made a sprightly response, and as soon as possible created a pause. She felt the detective's eyes upon her as if he were studying her, sizing her up.

"I'm going to take a risk by speaking to you very frankly, Miss Hallett," began Rason. "I'm afraid there's trouble brewing for Mrs. Hallett."

"Then, surely the thing to do would be to see her," said Joan, coldly.

But that kind of treatment, as she was to learn, had no effect on Rason.

"Miss Hallett," he said, "you were present at the inquest on Edward March—I saw you at the back of the court."

"Well?"

"You heard Mrs. Hallett's evidence, and—you know perfectly well that it was inaccurate on at least one important point."

Joan was silent, waiting.

"I refer to Mrs. Hallett's statement as to the time when she gave the pearl-headed pin to Mr. March. I think you know that that is inaccurate."

"How can you possibly—"

"Excuse me," interrupted Rason. "I don't want to trick you into a false position. Mr. Bristowe has admitted to me that he had seen her wearing the pearl-headed pin in her own flat just before she went to Cordways House—that is, on Monday afternoon. And I think you must have seen it, too."

At mention of Ray's name a little gasp broke from Joan which the detective misinterpreted.

"There is nothing in the least to be alarmed about," he hastened to assure her. "If Mrs. Hallett did in point of fact give the pin to Mr. March at Cordways House on Monday afternoon, it doesn't mean that we suspect Mrs. Hallett of anything particularly dreadful. It means no more than that it is a point we must investigate in cases like this—we investigate absolutely everything, knowing that nine-tenths of our investigations will lead nowhere. I want to end this particular blind alley with regard to Mrs. Hallett. Can you help me in any way?"

"None whatever, I'm afraid," answered Joan. "My mother and I go separate ways a good deal."

"Can you suggest any reason why Mrs. Hallett should pretend she did not meet Mr. March at that place and time if in fact she did?"

Joan shook her head.

" weren't you yourself rather puzzled by it—knowing what you knew about the pin?"

No use denying that, thought Joan.

"I was puzzled to a mild extent," she admitted. "But I took it for granted that, knowing the man was murdered that night, my mother simply got a sort of shrinking from the whole subject—she's very timid, you know—and, as she could not be doing any harm by saying what she said—"

Rason appeared to give consideration to her words.

"Still—perjury is a bit of an undertaking," he suggested.

"Perjury!" echoed Joan. "You don't mean to say you intend to prosecute her for that—a trifling little—"

"That's the essence of the whole thing," asserted Rason. "Show me it was a trifle, and I can recommend my superior to take no further notice of it. It is probably just some little vanity on your mother's part—but it's no good my saying that sort of thing to my colleagues and my chief here. I can't talk to them as I can talk to you. If I say anything, I've got to give solid reasons for it."

Joan rose.

"I understand that," she said. "But I can do nothing. My mother has not confided in me in this matter. Is there anything else you want to ask me?"

"No, thanks, Miss Hallett," Rason answered sadly. "I thought possibly you might be able to supply some explanation, but in any case I'm extremely obliged to you for coming. But there is something else I want to tell you, and that is that we shall have to satisfy ourselves as to the reason for Mrs. Hallett's conduct. We shall find out just why she did this, that, and the other. We shall tabulate every action of hers—see an account for every moment of her time, day and night, until we have sifted this matter. Won't you stop all this unpleasantness by giving us the straight tip?"

"You speak as if I were holding something back."

"Are you not, Miss Hallett? Remember, you were holding back your knowledge of the pearl-headed pin."

"But nothing further. If I could help you—"

"If you could help your mother—"

"You can bet your bottom dollar I would do it," said Joan. "But I can't—at present, anyhow. Good-morning, Mr. Rason."

Joan left Scotland Yard her cheeks burning with indignation—but the indignation was not for the detective.

Back at the flat, she knocked at her mother's door and received a summons to enter.

Mrs. Hallett was finishing breakfast in bed. A single glance told Joan that her mother probably had slept but little.

"Hallo, mumsie!" she said with forced cheerfulness. "You look a bit boiled. I'd take it easy today, if I were you. By the way—will you give me that check for Ray?"

"For Ray?" repeated Mrs. Hallett absently. "O, yes, of course. He was to have a thousand pounds. I shall have to go and see the bank manager."

"I thought if you would give it to me I could see that Ray gets it, and it would save you writing letters and so on," said Joan. "You remember it's not for himself, don't you? May I get your checkbook?"

"Yes, please, dear. It's in the second drawer in my desk," answered Mrs. Hallett, listlessly.

Joan brought the checkbook and a fountain pen.

"I haven't a thousand pounds in the bank," said Mrs. Hallett, presently.

"Cross the check. That will give you time to make arrangements," advised Joan.

Mrs. Hallett paused in the act of doing so.

"Have you seen your father this morning?"

"No, dear. Finish the crossing—that's right! I saw him last night. He told me you didn't feel up to the Riviera trip just at present."

"No. I thought it better to wait a little. I—I've not been feeling at all myself lately."

Joan smiled grimly. It was better to leave it at that. Nothing could be gained by further questioning and expostulation with her mother. Nothing would be gained by reporting her conversation with the detective. She took the check and, after a few hurried commonplace, left the flat.

In the street, she walked a few yards and hailed a taxi.

"The Temple," she ordered and stepped in.

It cost her no little to give simple direction—"The Temple." An hour ago she would have told herself that she would do absolutely anything on earth rather than seek out Ray. Now that Ray had apparently given information against her mother to the police, there was nothing for it but to clinch her teeth and go through with it.

If You Neglect Your Eyes

People make a great mistake to neglect such an important thing as expert examination of the eyes.

Nothing is more nerve-racking than eye strain, and it is more often due to impaired vision which could be corrected with the proper glasses.

2 Men and Terrier Fight Six Minutes With Wounded Bear

Fort William, Ontario, September 17.—For six furious minutes, two men and a bull terrier fought a pained bear until a well-placed rifle bullet ended the fight and the animal's life after the men had been badly lacerated by the bear's raking claws.

Robert McMichael and Ralph Miller, farmers, coming across the bear in a wood, fired and wounded it. The enraged animal charged. McMichael fired again, missed and then fell beneath the impact of the animal's charge.

The huge paws slashed at the two men, cutting their flesh and fracturing McMichael's leg. The latter's bull terrier then leaped into the fray, sinking its teeth into the wool of the bear's neck. Brain severed away to loosen the dog's grip, and Miller crawled from under, grasped the gun which had fallen to the ground and shot the bear to death.

Evening and Dance Frocks

$24.<sup>75</sup> and $29.<sup>75</sup>

First thing you notice about them is their charm. Indeed, they're wholly captivating! They've innumerable clever little ways all their own of interpreting the whims of Fashion that make them absolutely delightful.

And there are so many styles to choose from. Bouffant taffeta frocks with skirts festooned with ribbons caught here and there with flowers, scallops edged with metal laces; high-colored Canton crepes all a-shimmer with glistening crystal beads; airy Georgettes with circular swirling skirts, with silver leaves caught and held fast by shining drops of dew that prove to be brilliant rhinestones—and that's just the beginning of the style story of these frocks! In all white, turquoise, rose, green, peach, orchid, maize and apricot.

Up until now you've no idea of the surprise in store for you, unless you've peeped at their price tickets. For you'd never, never dream from the style of them and the charm of them that these frocks are only $24.75 and $29.75—but it's the truth!

Girls' Gingham Frocks Adorably Pretty $2.19

Mother's appraising eye will note at once that they're good-looking, but it will dwell approvingly upon the fine, smooth quality of the gingham in them. For these gingham are sturdy woven to wear a long, long time—and they'll launder beautifully all the while.

Styled with smart inverted plaits or in slim, straight lines. In a variety of pretty plaids and stripes—green, rose, blue, tan and combinations. Sizes 6 to 14 years.

HIGH LIGHTS OF HISTORY

IX—Amerigo Vespucci

by J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

AMONG THE INTREPID EXPLORERS TO FOLLOW THE PATH OF COLUMBUS TO THE NEW WORLD WAS AMERIGO VESPUCCI. BORN IN FLORENCE, ITALY, HE LATER BECAME A MERCHANT IN CADIZ, SPAIN, WHERE HE HELPED FIT OUT THE FLEET OF COLUMBUS.

DESIRING TO EXPLORE THE NEW LAND ACROSS THE SEA, HE ENTERED THE SERVICE OF THE KING OF PORTUGAL AS A NAVIGATOR.

VESPUCCI'S MOST FAMOUS VOYAGE WAS IN 1501. IN THAT YEAR HE SAILED FROM LISBON TO CAPE SAN ROQUE ON THE COAST OF SOUTH AMERICA AND HEADING SOUTHWEST SAILED FOR WEEKS ALONG THE SHORE. THEN TURNING TO THE SOUTH, EAST HE KEPT ON UNTIL HE STRUCK A BLEAK, BARREN ISLAND IN 54° SOUTH LATITUDE.

FINALLY HEADING FOR HOME HE BRAVELY SAILED STRAIGHT ACROSS THE ATLANTIC TO SIERRA LEONE, REACHING LISBON AFTER AN ABSENCE OF MORE THAN A YEAR.

THIS VOYAGE PROVED THAT THE NEW WORLD WAS NOT AN ISLAND OFF THE COAST OF ASIA, AS HAD BEEN THOUGHT, BUT A MIGHTY CONTINENT.

MAP SHOWING THE NEW WORLD AS A PENINSULA ATTACHED TO THE CONTINENT OF ASIA.

MAP SHOWING THE NAME "AMERICA" APPLIED TO THE ENTIRE CONTINENT.

SHORTLY AFTER VESPUCCI'S RETURN, A NEW EDITION OF PTOLEMY'S "GEOGRAPHY" WAS PREPARED BY THE COLLEGE OF ST. DIE, FRANCE, WHEREIN THE NEW DISCOVERIES WERE SPOKEN OF AS "AMERICA, THE LAND OF AMERICUS." WALDSEEMÜLLER, A PROFESSOR AT ST. DIE, MADE A MAP AT THE SAME TIME LABELING THE NEW CONTINENT "AMERICA."

INCOME TAX PAYMENTS EXCEED $1,500,000

Income tax payments for the third quarter which has just closed totaled about $1,500,000, which despite a reduction of approximately 20 per cent in the taxes lacked only about $34,000 of equalling the amount collected during the same period last year. It was announced Thursday by Josiah T. Rose, collector of internal revenue.

"If the old rate were still in effect Georgia income taxes for the quarter just closed would have exceeded those last year by approximately $350,000," Mr. Rose said. "Internal revenue collections for the first two months of the present fiscal year have been more than $400,000 greater than collections for the same period last year. The federal fiscal year begins July 1. Exact figures as to income tax payments and other internal revenue collections are announced from Washington and Mr. Rose declined to give them out. He stated he made the above announcement in order to refute reports that collections of his department are below the average and to tell Georgians that there is plenty of money in this state.

2 COMPENSATION CLAIMS ALLOWED FOR C. L. SMITH

Action of the industrial commission in awarding compensation of $12 a week for 250 weeks to C. L. Smith, former employee of the International Vegetable Oil company, was upheld Thursday by the state court of appeals in reversing a previous decision.

Notice of certiorari to the supreme court has been filed by counsel for the U. S. Casualty company in the case, which involved, according to the evidence, a rare disease known as blastomycosis.

According to the evidence, Smith suffered burns on the neck from escaping steam, and before the wound healed, descended into an ammonia pit to cut off a burst ammonia gas pipe. The fumes of ammonia irritated the wound, and caused the infection, it was alleged.

Smith was awarded compensation by the industrial commission. Later his arm was amputated and, alleging that its loss arose out of and in the scope of his employment, he filed a second claim and again was awarded compensation.

On the second award of compensation, the case was taken to the court of appeals, which at first held Smith couldn't recover, and then, on a rehearing, decided that he could.

BOND MARKET
ON HEAVY TRADING

DAILY BOND SUMMARY.

Thurs. Wed.

Ten first-grade rails 83.07 83.07

Ten public utilities 92.40 92.35

Ten industrials 92.96 92.05

Combined average 92.42 92.05

Total sales $16,200,000.

New York, September 16.—(AP)

Stimulated by the ready oversubscription

of more than $75,000,000 of new bond offerings in the last two days,

bond trading today was marked by rising prices and renewed activity.

Increasing supplies of money, available

at lower rates of interest, sought

an outlet in investment channels and accounted for the expanded volume of business.

Prompt oversubscription of the $50-

000,000 bond issue of the Bell Telephone company of Pennsylvania, offered

today was followed by a rise in the prices of the bonds on the stock exchange to more than the offering price. The offerings price, The German Renten-

bank 7s, which were sold yesterday

also continued to command a premium

of about 1 1/2 points, and were turned over in large volume.

With Argentine 6 per cent bonds

selling around the highest level of the year, Wall Street was not surprised to learn that the final $30,000,000 portion of a $150,000,000 authorized loan

would be placed on the market here.

J. P. Morgan and company are expected to make the offering next week, probably

in the form of 30-year 6 per cent

bonds preferred around 96.

Florida, Western and Northern 7

per cent bonds were in seasonal demand

today, trading, morning 18 points to a record high price of 182. The rise

was based on a corresponding advance

in shares of the Land Company of Florida, for which the bonds were carried by the railroad's obligations.

Buying interest in these issues was heightened by improvement in the company's position due to the Florida

land boom.

Gains in other rail issues were more moderate, with Union Pacific receiving

note Central 5 1/2 and Chicago and

Alton 5 1/2 showing conspicuous strength. Independent steel and oil issues also were in demand.

Illinois University Deans

REFUTE LABOR DELEGATE'S CHARGES

Nail Organized Vice Story

Champaign, Ill., September 17.—The Illinois Federation of Labor conducted today witnessed the unique spectacle of staid deans of the University of Illinois appearing on its platform to deny charges of immorality among students attending their institution of learning.

A storm had arisen when Edwin Wright, of Chicago, delegate to the convention, charged that the moral tone of the institution was such, that he would not wish his son to attend. Indignant protests came from many members at his sensational utterances, and excitement increased, when it was learned that officials of the university would appear personally to combat the charges.

There is absolutely no system of organized vice in the university," declared Dean K. C. Babcock, acting president of the institution, as he took the stand before the assembled delegates. He was supported by Deans Thomas, Arkel, Clark and C. M. Thompson, as well as Sheriff John Gray, of Champaign, who said that in Gray read reports showing that in 500 raids on Champaign bootlegging and gambling houses in three years, not one student had been arrested. No students had been involved in the 400 arrests for gambling and bootlegging over the period, he said.

Dean Clark, in discussing the bootleg question, said that "such drinking and gambling as is found among the students—and it is negligible in proportion to the number enrolled—are the results of parental teaching."

Wright, who started all the excitement, explained that his accusations were not specific, and were made in an attitude of "helpfulness and not criticism." He had previously said that some of his ideas were based on books he had read, describing the wild liquor-drenched life supposed to be typical of college life.

Dean K. C. Babcock, president of the federation, after hearing the statements of the university officials, announced from the platform that he was satisfied that the university is a law-abiding institution for the boys and girls of Illinois.

FULTON BOY WINS 1 KILLED, INJURED AS CATTLE JUDGE AS FEUD FLARES

Athens, Ga., September 17.—(Special.)—John E. Stone, a Fulton county boy, today won first place on Georgia's judging team to the National Dairy show, which meets in Indianapolis next month. Stone was a member of the team from the Fulton district, which contested at the Agricultural college here today.

Three winning places on the team included Corral Harvey, a Tattall county girl. The winners are: John E. Stone, Fulton, first place; Wilbert Emich, Augusta, second place; George Thornton, Elbert county, third place, and Miss Harvey, fourth place.

Teams of three each, all members of the calf clubs of Georgia, conducted under auspices of the State College of Agriculture, contested for a place on the team, which will represent this state at the dairy show. Interest and rivalry in the contest was keen. Each of the 12 districts in the state was represented in the wide contest here today. The teams were selected for efficiency in judging dairy cows and heifers.

The State Kivania club is sponsoring the calf club work of Georgia, which enrolled about 1,000 members this year.

Dawsonville, Ga., September 17.—(Special.)—As a result of a family feud that dates back five years, Will Strickland is dead and Louis Edmonson is seriously wounded, following a pistol battle between the two men here Wednesday night.

Five years ago a brother of Edmonson, it is claimed, killed a man named Minney, and two years ago Strickland and Cliff Reese were charged with killing a man named Minney, a cousin of the man killed by Strickland. At a preliminary hearing, Strickland, Edmonson and Reese was held under bond.

When Strickland and Edmonson were here, words were passed between the two men, which resulted in the gun battle.
